

Breaking barriers, saving lives: Impact of the UN Partner Portal

Tivix, now Kelton, spearheaded the United Nations Partner Portal (UNPP) project with the aim of streamlining collaboration between UN agencies and Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) for a more inclusive and sustainable world. By creating a unified online platform, the UNPP facilitated seamless interactions, allowing CSOs to showcase their work while enabling UN agencies to identify potential partners efficiently. The portal's rapid coordination capabilities significantly improved humanitarian responses, ensuring timely and life-saving services for vulnerable populations during crises. Through its open-source nature and comprehensive documentation, the UNPP encouraged transparency and global collaboration, emphasizing the collective responsibility in achieving shared objectives. The project's successful outcome reinforced the UN's vision of fostering strong partnerships and joint efforts to address global challenges and improve communities' lives worldwide.

Client in spotlight

Found at the end of the Second World War, the United Nations (UN) stands as a global organization comprising 193 Member States united in their commitment to maintaining international peace and security. Each day, the UN diligently works to address worldwide challenges and deliver life-changing results to those in need. The organization's multifaceted efforts include providing life-saving support to populations affected by humanitarian crises, facilitating peace-building in conflict-ridden regions, supporting governments and citizens in advancing development and combating poverty, and promoting human rights on a global scale. These core pillars of the United Nations' work embody the mandates it receives from its Member States, solidifying its vital role in shaping a better and more inclusive world.

◆ FUN FACT

Almost 100 Mn people in around 88 countries receive aid from UN partners annually through food or cash distributions, nutrition support programmes, and other activities.

Key challenges

- 01 The United Nations' distributed and multi-agency structure posed challenges in effectively managing collaboration with Civil Society Organizations
- 02 The absence of a unified platform resulted in disconnected systems, siloed data, and manual data entry, leading to inefficient workflows

Solution

Tivix, now Kellton, embarked on the ambitious initiative of creating the United Nations Partner Portal (UNPP) to address the complex collaboration management challenges between UN agencies and Civil Society Organizations (CSOs). The primary objective was to foster a more inclusive and sustainable world by streamlining partnerships and facilitating seamless interactions. The UNPP was envisioned as an online community, serving as a unified platform where UN agencies and CSOs with shared values could gather, interact, and pool resources to achieve impactful results for communities worldwide.

To realize this vision, Kellton adopted a comprehensive approach, leveraging its expertise in frontend and backend development, Python/Django, and user experience (UX/UI) design. The portal was carefully crafted to create a user-friendly environment, encouraging CSOs to showcase their work and provide relevant contact information for UN agencies. This streamlined process enabled UN agencies to identify potential partners efficiently and engage in more fruitful collaborations. By creating a single source of truth for engaging with partner organizations, the UNPP eliminated the challenges posed by disconnected systems and manual data entry, thus enhancing overall efficiency and transparency in the partnership process.

The UNPP played a pivotal role in emergency contexts, swiftly enabling the UN to respond to crises. Identifying organizations already working in affected communities, the portal facilitated rapid mobilization of life-saving partnerships, benefiting vulnerable populations. Its open-source nature on GitHub promoted transparency and community collaboration, encouraging global contributions and fostering a sense of collective responsibility in advancing the UN's inclusivity and sustainable development mission. Tivix, now Kellton, successfully transformed collaboration dynamics through the UN Partner Portal, strengthening partnerships and joint efforts for a better world.

Insights and impact | Transformative impact of the UN Partner Portal

The United Nations Partner Portal (UNPP) exemplifies the transformative power of technology in fostering collaboration and humanitarian response. With streamlined processes, it swiftly mobilizes life-saving partnerships during emergencies, positively impacting vulnerable populations. The portal's open-source nature on GitHub promotes transparency and global collaboration, driving advancements in inclusivity and sustainable development. Tivix, now Kellton, showcased the potential of comprehensive technology solutions, reshaping collaboration dynamics and enhancing overall efficiency. Beyond partnerships, the UNPP inspires open dialogue and cooperation, highlighting technology's immense potential to create a better world.

Empowering seamless CSO interactions

We enabled CSOs for effective collaboration and impact

Rapidly mobilizing UN partnerships

Our swift UN partnerships positively aided vulnerable populations in crises